

ABSTRACT

A configuration tool, including a computer having a memory and a processor is disclosed. The configuration tool includes a database of transit system information. The database is in communications with the computer. At least one transit information display in communication with the computer over a radio frequency communications link is included. The configuration tool also includes a program running on the computer. The program is configured to define parameters for the at least one transit information display and to store the parameters in the database.